

What Really Hurts the Country?

by Rick McCorkle

Election fraud hurts the country. Nothing hurts it worse. Exposing the fraud and counteracting it is the most important thing we can do. If we give up, then we're conceding that crime pays and honesty doesn't. Donald Trump clearly won the election, but his victory was pushed aside by millions of fake and invalid ballots, purposeful miscounting of ballots, and perverted vote tallies performed by malicious software. Statistical analyses performed by experts clearly indicate that Biden's numbers in key areas had to be produced by fraud. President Trump must never concede, and we must stand behind him and never accept defeat. We must demand recounts and even entirely new elections. We must also stand behind Rudy Giuliani and Sidney Powell and their impressive and effective efforts to shine the light on the widespread criminal fraud of the Democrats. Giuliani is a veteran warrior against organized crime, and that's exactly what the Democrats are guilty of.

There can be no better evidence than hundreds of eye witnesses swearing to the fraud they have seen, especially since they put themselves in harm's way by doing so. To anyone but a fool, using Covid to strip away election integrity safeguards with a view toward controlling election results, and then allowing no scrutiny of the process, is clear evidence of fraud. If Republican observers were prevented from observing and whistleblowers had no ability to stop the fraud and seize evidence, then what other evidence could there possibly be? The answer is none. Even if the criminals themselves confessed, those confessions would be no more valid than what whistleblowers have already sworn to because they couldn't produce any evidence of their crimes. Democrats require no evidence when they falsely accuse Republicans. They accept without question the word of people who aren't even eye witnesses, and they only need one such person, not a multitude. Democrats know they're hypocrites, and they don't care if they're called hypocrites. Their goal is to win by any means necessary, and they think of conservative Republicans as weak minded fools to be pushed aside. They do not fear us.

It's the Democrats and the media outlets that support them that have turned America into a third-rate banana republic, not the Republicans who are protesting the obvious fraud. If this election is not redone in an observable, impartial manner, then this country will be permanently run by just one thoroughly corrupt and lawless political party. The rights of freedom loving Americans will be trampled because Democrats believe that only they have rights and people who disagree with them don't. The Constitution will be discarded. It will be irrelevant. Good people will not vote and will not run for office because they'll know that they can't win.

Don't be swayed by the specious argument that we must abandon the presidency to keep the senate. We can and must do both things, win the election and keep the senate. If we let the fraud go uncorrected and unpunished, then the same fraud will steal Georgia's two senate seats. There is only one fight. Stay in it. Give all the time and money you can. It will never be time to move on for the good of the country. Letting evil prevail is never good for any country.
